Project Title: Grandma's Kitchen by Edgar Gomez

1. Introduction

The objective of this website is to keep family recipes, traditions, and remedies alive so they can be passed on to future generations. Growing up I used to hear my grandparents say, "Everything should be in moderation and that includes living with moderation". I guess now I see this as not letting moderation prevent us from enjoying a good home meal regardless of its calories. With this website, I intend to collect different family recipes so they can be passed on to my kids and their kids.

Although at this time I don't perceive opening a business, perhaps in the future my kids or their kids might decide to open a restaurant or perhaps write a book about our family's recipes and traditions.

2. Expected List of Features

For this project, I envision to have the following features
- A short cultural intro about food from Northern Mexican
  - Mexican food is quite different across the different regions of Mexico
- Differences between Mexican food and Tex-Mex food
  - The main ingredients that distinguish Mexican and Tex-Mex food
- A list of different meals / main courses
  - Create a gallery showing a picture of the meal classified by type of meet and making the picture an active tile to where visitors can access the recipe
- Provide my contact information as well suggestions/comments form where visitors can leave their comments

3. Market Survey

- Perform some research on similar websites that showcase meal recipes to identify most common elements, so I can include them on my project.
- Interview family members to identify different meals I should include on my first draft, then continue adding as I continue to built on this project.

4. References

- Be respectful and professional to give credit and references to any materials / websites / books that I find relevant to my project's website.
